My favorite nursing theory, and theory I have chosen to use to guide my dissertation project, was built by Helen Erickson and is called the Modeling and Role Modeling Theory. It is based upon the premise that patient behaviors are driven by unmet needs, a crucial perspective when caring for patients type II diabetes because they are often described as noncompliant. The Modeling and Role Model Theory encompasses a shared responsibility approach, enabling patients and their provider to work hand-in-hand to identify healthcare goals, and ultimately, improve their health and well-being.
